

Preserving India's Wildlife

Saving wildlife for a better future

"We can't just consume, reproduce and die! We must take pride in making a difference to the planet that gave us everything."
- Kartick Satyanarayan

Get Involved

read more

Our Work

read more

Donate

read more

Reading Selections

Elephants

June 20th 2020

The survival of the elephant in India is critical to the survival of the entire species in Asia. Home to almost 60% of Earth’s remaining Asian elephant population, India is plagued with a lack of awareness and education which is leading to the persistent enslavement of these majestic animals for tourism, manual labor, performances, processions, entertainment and street begging.

Wildlife SOS leads efforts to protect wild elephant populations in India, as well as rescue, treat and care for elephants exploited in the abusive tourism and “begging elephant” industries. We specifically address the problem of injured and sick elephants that are forced to work in slums and crowded cities. Our aim is to reach out and help the elephants that are blind, elderly, wounded, malnourished and dehydrated or those being used illegally and commercially under deprived conditions.

It is important to note that most captive elephants in India are owned illegally, and strict enforcement of laws is needed to end illegal trafficking of elephants. Our Wildlife SOS sanctuaries allow laws to be enforced because they give authorities a home for these

Leopards

June 20th 2020

The survival of the elephant in India is critical to the survival of the entire species in Asia. Home to almost 60% of Earth’s remaining Asian elephant population, India is plagued with a lack of awareness and education which is leading to the persistent enslavement of these majestic animals for tourism, manual labor, performances, processions, entertainment and street begging.

Wildlife SOS leads efforts to protect wild elephant populations in India, as well as rescue, treat and care for elephants exploited in the abusive tourism and “begging elephant” industries. We specifically address the problem of injured and sick elephants that are forced to work in slums and crowded cities. Our aim is to reach out and help the elephants that are blind, elderly, wounded, malnourished and dehydrated or those being used illegally and commercially under deprived conditions.

It is important to note that most captive elephants in India are owned illegally, and strict enforcement of laws is needed to end illegal trafficking of elephants. Our Wildlife SOS sanctuaries allow laws to be enforced because they give authorities a home for these

Popular Blog Posts

How We Can Together Save India

Elephants Are Now Dying Off, We Can Still Save Them

Leopards Are In Fact In India and Its Jungles

Our Top Donors From the Past Year 2019

Recent Blog Posts

Elephants

Leopards

Leopards Are In Fact In India and Its Jungles

Our Top Donors From the Past Year 2019

How Every Donation Helps the Wildlife In India

Donation Selection

Here are a few areas you can donate to help save, etither a certain species of just in general

Elephants

Donate here to help save the elephants in the India jungles

DONATE

Leopards

Donate here to help save the leopards in the India jungles

DONATE

Bears

Donate here to help save the bears in the India jungles

DONATE

Reptiles

Donate here to help save the reptiles in the India jungles

DONATE

Conservation Projects

Donate here to help us fund our conservation projects throughout India

DONATE

General All Purpose

Donate here to help us fund all of our efforts and save every animal and fund our projects

DONATE